• Treasury yields broadly fell over the week and the curve flattened, amid growing concerns over the impact of the coronavirus outbreak and mixed US economic releases
  • US fourth quarter GDP growth was 2.1%, as the economy continued its longest expansion on record; however, growth for 2019 was 2.3%, the slowest annual pace since 2016
  • The US Census Bureau reported that new orders for durable goods increased 2.4% in December, but excluding defense, decreased 2.5%
• At its first meeting of the year, the Federal Reserve (Fed) left the fed funds target unchanged at 1.5% - 1.75%
  • Fed officials continue to view the economy as healthy and do not expect any rate changes through the end of year
  • The Fed’s actions were interpreted as dovish, and the market-implied probability of at least one rate cut during the year increased from 74% to 87%
• Investment-grade corporate issuance trailed off, with less than $8 billion priced during the week, below expectations of $20 billion to $25 billion
  • Despite the low supply, investment-grade corporate spreads widened by 6bps week-over-week to 99bps
  • Given the risk-off tone, month-to-date corporate excess returns swung negative over the week
• Residential mortgage-backed securities (MBS) underperformed amid elevated refinance activity, as the MBA Refinance Index rose 8%
• The municipal bond market is on track for its biggest monthly gain in five years; the Bloomberg Barclays Municipal Bond Index month-to-date returned 1.69%, fueled by strong demand
