

- Investor focus was on key inflation data released this week that suggested inflationary pressures may be easing, although market volatility remained elevated with the debt-ceiling debate intensifying
 - CPI grew at 0.4% month-over-month in April, led by a 2.7% rise in energy prices; Core CPI, which excludes volatile items such as food and energy, also grew at 0.4%, as prices of used cars increased for the first time since June 2022, growing 4.4%
- Treasury yields moved higher across the curve; the spread between the 2- and 10-year Treasury rate remained inverted at -47bps
 - The US Treasury auctioned $35 billion in 10-year Treasury notes this week which received healthy demand; the 10-year Treasury yield rose 10bps week-over-week to 3.44%
- Investors continued to have strong demand for corporate bonds, as an influx of supply saw new issuance reach $33 billion this week
 - Corporate spreads widened 3bp week-over-week to 146bps
- The high-yield primary market remained resilient despite continued volatility as another $3 billion priced, pushing monthly issuance in May to roughly $9 billion, up more than 100% from May 2022
 - High-yield spreads tightened 2bps to 471bps, while yields rose 3bps to 8.56%
- Commercial mortgage-backed securities (CMBS) underperformed other securitized sectors as concerns about commercial real estate (CRE) continued to permeate the markets
- Municipal fund flows continued a negative streak, as investors withdrew roughly $600 million from mutual funds, marking the third straight week of outflows; municipals outperformed Treasuries and ratios moved lower across the curve
